

The 6th Annual Force Health Promotion Conference
Population Health and Well-being Track
Albuquerque, NM
11-15 August 2003

Call for Spotlight Presentation Abstracts

The Population Health and Well-being track is designed to unite the population health and health promotion specialties in an integrated environment that will provide scientific and technical training necessary for the diverse specialties; allow participants to address relevant and significant force health protection issues; and provide mentoring and networking opportunities.

We are delighted to provide attendees with the opportunity to present their work in a spotlight presentation. Our focus will be junior officers (CPT and below) or NCOs. We will consider both research and applied presentations related to population health and well-being. Spotlight sessions will consist of a 15-minute presentation followed by 5-minute question and answer period. Health educators, health promotion directors, health care providers and other interested personnel are encouraged to submit proposals.

Selection criteria will include the following: importance to readiness, importance to health promotion, initial and follow-up results/outcomes, applicability to wider population, lessons learned and impact statement. If selected, the primary investigator/project manager will be offered funding to deliver their presentation.

Abstracts are due by 2 April 2003. We will notify applicants by 9 April 2003 of the status of their submission. Those selected will receive further guidance regarding submitting CEU/CME paperwork and presentations.
